LONGING FOR THE FIELDS.

Beyond the realm of barter and of pence;
Beyond the closeness of a social clime
Where, like an eager bard enchained by rhyme,
One's freer spirit oft receives offense;
Beyond brick walls and dreary chimneys, whence
The sweat of industry exhales in grime;
Beyond the purlieus of disease and crime
And haunts where honest lives grow hard and tense—

Beyond all these in what tranquillity,
Glad as the skies that over them do rest,
The fields upyield their new mown fragrancy
To winds refreshed on some clear stream's cool breast
Or laden with wood scents and minstrelsy
Of the musicians of the bough and nest!
—William Struthers in Home Journal.

A LOVE STORY.

The house in which this little story came to pass was one of the smallest and humblest in the whole village. The linden tree in the yard was tall enough to spread its protecting arms over the low shingle roof, moss grown with age. Under the eaves and in the ingles good fairies had taken up their quarters, and stable and granary, field and meadow, were blessed with prosperity and growth.

It had always been that way since Hubert and Kathrine came there to live. They brought with them but little more for a dowry than courage and health and strong, willing, working hands, for the little farm was not their own. They had leased it for a term of years. From season to season they prospered, and material bliss came with overflowing hands when a little dark haired girl was added to the flaxen headed youngster. The girl hadn't come in the usual way, like the boy, whose arrival the stork had heralded from the housetop, but suddenly and unexpectedly. In the adjoining parish a distant relative of Kathrine's had died, and fearing no refusal had left her dark eyed baby girl to Hubert and his wife. They were astonished, to be sure, when one morning the mail carrier lifted out of his small country wagon a bundle wrapped in a red checked pillow, with a letter from the dead woman acquainting them with the tiny stranger's mission. Mistress Kathrine was not long at a loss what to do, and she soon persuaded her husband, who shook his head a little doubtfully at first. Their own boy, John, was almost 5 years old. No, the undertaking was not such a momentous one after all, and the old pine cradle that had been stowed away in the garret was brought down into the bedroom of Hubert and his wife.

Thus was little Liz's entrance made. She grew out of the cradle and into short clothes, and soon her little, quick feet pattered over Mother Kathrine's clean kitchen floor and over garden and field. Her long, dark braids flew in the wind, and her bright, brown eyes stole their way into every one's heart. John kept good company with the little sister. In summer they hunted for berries together in the woods, and when the winter came they coasted down the hillside on a little sled the boy had himself built. They climbed the trees and picked the apples from the branches that would not give them up to Hubert's vigorous shaking. When other youngsters troubled the child or made her cry, John came to the rescue and proved an able champion.

The years sped on, and the prosperity and good fortune of the farm grew on apace. The homespun linen in the cupboard was piled up high, and the pennies in the trunk were first turned into silver and then into gold. When the lease ran out, the farm became Hubert's property. He bought adjoining acres and planted them with grain, and the cows and calves in his stables augmented beyond his hope.

"The strange child has brought us luck," Mother Kathrine was wont to say, until she forgot altogether that Liz was not her own flesh and blood.

"John must have the advantage of a better education than I had," declared Hubert, when the lad was 18 years old. "I'll send him to a good commercial college, and I'll keep him there as long as he can find anything to learn."

So John was sent away a good many hundred miles from home. The farmer's boy should see the world. He shouldn't choose his vocation ignorant of its ways, and if he found anything that gratified his tastes better than the simple farm life, Hubert was willing to make the sacrifice and set him up in business.

After three years John came back, ready to settle down and live and work on the farm like his father. He found Liz as much changed as she found him. Before her stood a broad shouldered man. Self consciousness was in the serious face, and the sprouting mustache suited it well. The half grown girl he remembered had blossomed into a beautiful maiden.

Soon after John's return Hubert and Kathrine wondered why their boy and girl, who had been the best of friends all their lives, no longer got along well together. There were little bickerings and differences all the time. When Liz was gay, John was mad, and when he teased her she resented it. When, as was often the case at first, he sat down for a quiet, confidential chat with her, she snubbed him and gave him crusty answers, and when he ordered her about, as men like to do with their women folk, she flew into a rage. Out of their insignificant quarrels came serious difficulties. Mother Kathrine, who in all the years of her married life had been accustomed to even, quiet ways, was distressed over the breaking up of her peaceful household. She mediated, admonished, pleaded. It was all in vain. Father Hubert lost his patience and threatened to box his son's ears and drive him from home if he could not get along with the girl. One morning, after another turbulent scene the night before, Liz came with tearful eyes and pale cheeks to her foster mother.

"Mother," she began, "I have been thinking that father should not have cause to send John away on my account. Let me go out to service myself."

At first Mother Kathrine objected. Then she sat down and studied over her daughter's proposition. Perhaps the child was right. It might do her good to eat the bread of strangers, for a little while at any rate.

It did not take Liz long to carry out her plan. The pretty, well behaved girl found service in a small summer resort in the neighborhood. The male guests took a bit more freedom with the pretty lassie than she liked, and the cook proposed to her about once a week. She refused him peremptorily every time, but at last, tired of his persistence, she decided to go home on Sunday to consult with Mother Kathrine about changing her place. How much homesickness had part in this resolution Liz would not own to herself.

Meanwhile John had been unhampered. It was quiet once more about the place since Liz was gone, but they were not any merrier. The two old people missed the girl every hour in the day, and John's face wore a cloud.

"I think it's time for the boy to marry," said Hubert one day to his wife. "The richest girl in the village is casting sheep's eyes at him. If he wants her, I am sure he can get her, and that would be a great good fortune for our John."

"And we, father?"

"We would have Liz at home again."

The richest girl in the village was a miller's daughter, and John grew thoughtful when the subject of his marriage with her was broached to him by his parents. After a little contemplation he came to the conclusion that the miller's daughter was really a good looking lass, who had always shown fondness for him. In future he would not lose an opportunity to play the agreeable to her.

When Sunday came—the old folks had gone off on a visit—John donned his best clothes, and with the silver mounted pipe in his mouth strolled through the village toward the mill. When he came to the milldam, he paused. Here it was where he had pulled Liz out of the water. What a dear little thing she was then! He crossed the brook and glanced into the garden where the miller's daughter sauntered up and down between her flower beds. It seemed strange and foolish to him all at once that he should go in there and propose to her, and the mill and the quaint little house and big forest behind lost all attractiveness for John. He turned and started for home much faster than he had come away.

On the bench under the linden tree sat a girl in holiday dress. In her hand she held a rose. She arose and came toward him, holding out her hand.

"Good afternoon, John," she said.

"Liz!" he cried and in a moment held her in his arms and kissed her soundly. She pushed him aside a bit, and the hot color mounted from her throat to the roots of her dark hair, but she said nothing and went into the house with him.

Within it was shadowy and cool. The blossoms of the linden tree sent their fragrance through the open window and slanting sun rays danced merrily over Mother Kathrine's shining tin plates on the wall.

The bullfinches sang in the trees and the water splashed gayly as it fell from the spout into the trough. John pushed his chair close to the girl's and laid his arm around her shoulder.

Liz shook her head.

"Liz, we've been such good friends always; but we are not brother and sister after all."

"No, that we are not," answered Liz softly.

"And that's why I think you had better be my wife. Will you, Liz?"

Liz said not a word. With downcast eyes she plucked the rose to pieces that still was in her hand, nodded her head and smiled, as she had been wont to smile. The bullfinch finished his song, the linden tree spent its fragrance, and the sun shone on as if nothing had happened, while the lovers sat in the dusk and waited for the home coming of their parents.—St. Louis Republic.

Lady Beaconsfield.

We do not know enough of that strange and attractive personality, the wife of Lord Beaconsfield, and any contributions to our knowledge of her are very welcome. "Though the good fortune of meeting Lady Beaconsfield," says a writer in Cornhill Magazine, "was mine only once I have a strong remembrance of her. It was in the year she died, but she had then, at 80 years old, very evident remains of the vivacity which Disraeli marked when he first met her in 1832. Seen at a distance, in a dimly lighted room, what first struck me about the small, dark, quick eyed figure was the strangeness of its attire—homage, it might have been, to her Dizzy's early tastes. What I suppose should be called the bodice of her gown was a sort of dark crimson or bright claret colored velvet tunic (but like nothing else that I have ever seen), going high in the neck, and with what I took for an order of some kind fastened upon the left breast. This unusual decoration was puzzling till, on being taken up to her, I saw that it was a framed oval miniature of her husband, probably 'by Ross.' This was her decoration, pinned on the breast in exactly the right place."

Pennies Not Popular.

It is estimated that many hundred pennies are collected by the car conductors in the course of a day, and as they cannot turn them in at the end of their day's work they often have trouble in disposing of them. In speaking of this a cable car conductor said to a reporter: "Women are almost sure to give us pennies, and they often search their pocketbooks for these coins. We usually give a number of pennies back in change when a bill is given us, and we see that women get their fair share. The reason why the company will not receive pennies is because it would take too long to count them all."—New York Mail and Express.

FIDDLER WANTED.

HE WAS FAMED AND AT DANCE MUSIC DID VERY WELL.

Fun and Frolic In a Washout on the Oregon Short Line—Millionaires and Immigrants Attend a Dance and Experience a Musical Surprise.

On St. Patrick's day, 1894, five through trains, bound both to the eastward and westward of the Oregon Short Line of the Union Pacific, were tied up at Glenns Ferry, Ida. They had been caught between two serious washouts, one at Pocatello and the other at Indian Creek, three days before, and had to wait at Glenns Ferry for track repairs along the line before they could proceed. Glenns Ferry is a bleak little railroad and sheep herders' town of 300 or 400 inhabitants, situate on a sagebrush bluff overlooking the unspeakably dark and dreary Snake river.

The five stalled trains carried 600 passengers of as miscellaneous a character as could be gotten together at a carefully selected congress of types. There were emigrants and millionaires; soldiers on the move; dainty women in palace cars and women bound for Creede and Cripple Creek in day coaches; miners who killed time during the wait in shooting magpies circling over the Snake river; Shoshone Indians traveling to the limits of their reservation; well behaved and quiet people, noisy and tumultuous people. But all were stuck alike, and they made the best of it.

Lines of social demarcation were for the time erased. All hands mingled easily on the little station platform and in the little station waiting room. The supply of food on the dining cars gave out the first day of the hitch, and everybody was fed, and well fed, too, in the station eating room. They sat down at the tables in relays and patiently awaited their turns.

The railroad employees and their wives were to give a dance at the little town hall on St. Patrick's night. The switchman who had been customarily employed to fiddle for them had been switched to another division. In a quandary, the dance committee toured the trains and station to ascertain if any of the stalled passengers happened to be carrying a violin and was capable of producing music on it. In one of the sleeping cars they came across an artistic looking man, with very long hair, a seraphic, oleaginous countenance and exceedingly baggy clothes. They were looking for a fiddler, they said. Did he know of any on the train? Well, he didn't know (in outrageously bad English); he played a little himself once in awhile, and had rather a fair fiddle with him. The long haired man accented the "fiddle" rather curiously. But the railroad men were overjoyed. Would he play for them to dance with their wives and sweethearts? Certainly! Did he know dance music? Well, some.

All of the stalled passengers were invited to the dance, and they all went. A good many of them could not get in. The baggily clothed fiddler turned up in good time. The pianist was waiting for him. So was the railroad dance committee, one of the members of which slipped $3 in one dollar bills into the fiddler's hand as payment in advance for the evening's work. It was smilingly accepted. The dance began. The fireman's wife, who played the piano, produced an old bethumbed violin and piano tune book and turned to the lancers. She told the fiddler, at the end of the first dance, that he did pretty well, only he went too fast. Then there was a waltz. The fiddler was informed by his accompanist that he was getting along finely, and everybody in the room began to prick up his ears at the sweetness of the violin music, although the dances were common enough and tawdry enough.

Another waltz—the "Beautiful Blue Danube." All of the dancers on the floor stopped dead at the first bar, and the travelers with cultivated musical ears moved close to the piano. The pianist ceased. She wished to listen. The violin music was miraculous. The player swayed from side to side as he phrased. He appeared to be oblivious of his surroundings. He improvised variations of inspiring tenderness. He out-Straussed Strauss. His violin sang, throbbed with passion. When the last note died away, the people in the hall appeared to be in a dream—all but one.

"M. Ysaye," said Charley Fair, the son of the late United States Senator Fair, stopping from the throng, "won't you play that lively, rattling thing you gave us at the Bohemian club in San Francisco the other night? It's been running in my head ever since."

M. Ysayo played Berlioz's "Pizzicato" as he perhaps never played it before.—Washington Star.

The Du Maurier Woman.

In an article which the late Mr. Du Maurier wrote some years ago for The Magazine of Art apropos of the typical "pretty woman" of his drawings, occurs the following quaint and characteristic passage: "I do hope the reader does not dislike her—that is, if he knows her—I am so fond of her myself, or rather so fond of what I want her to be. She is my piece de resistance, and I have often heard her commended, and the praise of her has sounded sweet in mine ears and gone straight to my heart, for she has become to me as a daughter. She is rather tall, I admit, and a trifle stiff—but English women are tall and stiff just now—and she is rather too serious, but that is only because I find it so difficult with a mere stroke in black ink to indicate the enchanting little curved lines that go from the nose to the mouth corners, causing the cheeks to make a smile."

In the Omnibus.

Conductor—Beg pardon, madame, but these coppers are counterfeit.

INEDX-TRIBUNE

SONOMA, JANUARY 30, 1897.

H. H. GRANICE - - - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR.

"SONOMA NOT UP IN ARMS."

THE Call on Friday of last week published a sensational article headed "Sonoma People up in Arms," which does the citizens of this town and President Foster of the S. F. & N. P. Railway a great injustice. For some time past Mr. Foster has been negotiating with Mrs. Emparan, daughter of the late General Vallejo, for the Vallejo place. His object was to secure a long lease and convert the house and grounds into a first-class rural resort for the best class of people. Pending the negotiations, which were strictly private, this town has not been nor is it now "up in arms" against the leasing of the Vallejo place for the above object. On the contrary, anything that President Foster and his associates can do to bring people to town and valley will be hailed with delight by our citizens, as it will bring money into our midst and do more toward making known our matchless climate, beautiful scenery and hospitable people than any other one thing. There are a few chronics in this town who are opposed to everything that has a tendency to bring prosperity into our midst. In this instance the great bug a boo of "Sunday picnics" was raised. It was a cry of "wolf when there was no wolf." The INDEX-TRIBUNE is not in favor of Sunday picnics, and never has been, but we submit that if the railway people see fit to open up a large rural resort in the suburbs of Sonoma no objection should be raised to their running it as they please. President Foster will do nothing to bring discredit upon Sonoma.

New Advertisements.

The attention of our readers is called to the new advertisements which appear in these columns to-day.

Duhring's sale the past week was a successful one and his calicoes, ginghams, percales, etc., at 5c per yard went off like hot cakes. He is offering for next week a big bargain in ladies' and childrens' shoes. Read his adv. and give him a call.

F. Clewe, announces a clearance sale in these columns which will last for two weeks only. During that period he will reduce the price of dry goods, clothing, boots, shoes and furnishing goods 15 per cent.

Murphy, the enterprising furniture dealer of Petaluma, advertises a big auction sale to take place today in that city. Now is the time to refurnish your house.

Scott & Veal, the hardware merchants of Petaluma, have taken space on this page for the next six months. They want your patronage and when in Petaluma don't fail to give them a call if you want anything in their line. They will make it to your interest to call again.

Mrs. Ellen Glynn and her son James Glynn, after an absence of several years in San Francisco, have returned to this place and reopened the Sonoma House. "Jimmy," as he is familiarly known to his old Sonoma friends, will preside over the bar, which he will keep supplied with the very best of wines, liquors and cigars. The ad of this well-known and old-established resort appears in another column.

Don't Ever Advertise.

In a little way-back store, sitting just inside the door, was poor pay; not a customer was in, and we doubt if there had been one that day. Pay was looking sick and sore, he was ageing more and more, it was plain; and he startled with a frown, when he saw us bearing down in the rain. Straight we ask him then and there, though it didn't seem just fair, why it was that while others forged ahead, his own business was so dead, what the cause. Then a mist came in his eye, tears like Lima beans in size, trickled out; "Why it is, I realize, I don't ever advertise," was his shout.

Cotton is now being carried through San Francisco across the Pacific to Japan, there made into cloth and reshipped here for sale. The old Pioneer Woolen Mills of San Francisco, recently dismantled and carried to Japan, are now turning out woolen goods that come into competition with California manufacturers.

COUNTY GLEANINGS.

Tom Kelley of Bloomfield has been held for trial, bail being fixed at $1,000. He is charged with assaulting Ira Stuart with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder.

Dr. Mathe of Forestville sold to a wine firm in San Francisco, on Tuesday last, 72,000 gallons of red wine of last year's vintage. The price received was 20 cents per gallon delivered.

Deputy Sheriff Weise took Frank Coleby to Folsom Tuesday to commence the serving of a twelve years' sentence imposed Monday by Judge Burnett. Coleby plead guilty on the 18th inst. to a charge of robbery. He asked that the pronouncing of sentence be postponed one week. The request was granted and Monday Coleby appeared for sentence. He then wished to withdraw his plea and stand trial but the Judge denied his petition.

News has been received in Santa Rosa of the drowning of Will H. Dohn, eldest son of Geo. Dohn, the well-known winemaker of that city. The accident occurred the day after Christmas in a river near Topacala, Mexico. The young man had gone in swimming and while in the water was seized with cramps and sank before assistance could reach him. The body was recovered next day and buried. The young man left home about two months ago to engage in business in Mexico.

Little Jennie Tobin, aged 12, has been living with the Lewis family near Sebastopol for two years, and during that time, it is claimed, the little girl has often been cruelly used, though the child denied it. The persistent rumors of cruelty continued to reach the society for the prevention of cruelty to children and Saturday C. W. Otis, with an order from the child's mother, visited the Lewis place and took Jennie away. He says he found her dressed in a pair of men's overalls and engaged at hard work that might even have tired a strong man.

Lamoon, the Indian caught trapping fish in a basket near Cloverdale, was sentenced by Judge Burnett Monday to pay a fine of $100, or in lieu thereof to serve out his sentence at the rate of $10 a day. Last Monday Lamoon entered a plea of not guilty, but later he requested, through his attorney, Ross Campbell, to withdraw his plea of not guilty and plead guilty. He had understood that it was not against the law for an Indian to trap fish. Attorney Campbell stated that he though the wrong man had been arrested and that it was the fish commissioners that should have been sentenced instead of the Indian. Lamoon will be liberated in ten days.

REMINGTON,
Glen Ellen, Jan. 28, 1897.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It act directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. The Greatest Monarch

Is a fit subject for pity if he is troubled with dyspepsia, while his poorest subjects who digest properly may well be envied by a prince thus afflicted. The dyspeptic of every clime and nation owe a debt of gratitude to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which relieves them from one of the most obstinate and troublesome complaints against which medical skill is directed. On this continent, in Europe and the tropics, this sterling remedy is pre-eminently and justly popular, not only as a stomachic, but also as a means of preventing and curing malarial, rheumatic, kidney, bilious and nervous disorders. It improves appetite and sleep, hastens convalescence and the acquisition of vigor after exhausting maladies, and counteracts the infirmities of age. A wineglassful taken before retiring has a tendency to promote tranquil, health yielding sleep, a boon much coveted by nervous invalids.

Among the new materials there are certain mottled and plaid woois for street use that are very effective. These have a camel's-hair softness and often the same hairy surface, rich copper browns and sombre red predominating over other colors. "Tinder color" is a new shade of brown that has a hint of snuff in its redness.

The Dreaded Consumption Can Be Cured.

T. A. Slocum, M. C., the Great Chemist and Scientist, Will Send, Free, Three Bottles of His Newly Discovered Remedies to Sufferers.

Editor INDEX-TRIBUNE—I have discovered a reliable cure for Consumption and all Bronchial, Throat and Lung Diseases, General Decline, Loss of Flesh and all Conditions of Wasting Away. By its timely use thousands of apparently hopeless cases have been cured. So proof-positive am I of its power to cure, that to make its merits known, I will send, free, to any afflicted reader of your paper, three bottles of my Newly Discovered Remedies upon receipt of Express and Postoffice address.
When writing the doctor please mention this paper.

Won by Merit Solely.

Profs. Wickson and Woodworth of the State Experiment Station admit its superlative qualities. Edwin F. Adams, State Organizer Farmers' Institutes, says in place of lime, sulphur and salt mixture use it. Alex. Craw, State Quarantine Guardian, says he knows of no superior.

The thousands who have and are using it indorse the investigations of those eminent workers in the Horticultural field.

That

WHEELER'S I X L COMPOUND

When used at the same time and under the same conditions is not only as effective in removing the insect, but gives finer trees, better crops, less fungus troubles than when the lime, sulphur and salt mixture is used, and at a saving of 25 per cent.

Orchards upon which it has been used the same length of time as the lime, sulphur and salt mixture upon others are as clean of insect pests, have no trees of any kind of root affection, none have died from sour sap, and none exhibit gum diseases. It is always ready for use.

CITY OFFICIAL PAPER.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

DECAPITATED.

Superintendent Corbaley's Official Head Chopped Off by the Directors of the Donahue Railway.

W. G. Corbaley, Superintendent of the S. F. & N. P. Railway, who has been in the employ of the company for the past twenty years, has been removed by the directors. During his connection with the Donahue system Mr. Corbaley had worked himself up from brakesman to Superintendent, which latter position he has held with marked ability the past ten years.

H. C. Whiting, ex-General Manager, has been appointed to take Mr. Corbaley's place, while President Foster will combine the duties of General Manager with his position as the head of the company.

The removal of Mr. Corbaley is said to be the outcome of Sydney V. Smith's efforts to wrest the management of the road out of the hands of Mr. Foster and his friends. Another reason assigned for the retirement of Mr. Corbaley is that the directors wish to cut down the operating expenses of the road.

Sad News.

R. W. Bostmann received a telegram from New Jersey, on Thursday last, announcing the death of his mother. Two or three weeks ago Mr. Bostmann's parents left Sonoma to visit relatives and friends in the East. They expected to be absent several months. On the day preceding the receipt of the telegram Mr. Bostmann received a letter from his mother telling of a pleasant journey and their safe arrival on the Atlantic side of the continent. The letter was dated January 22d, and six days later the dispatch came from the father announcing the mother's demise. The telegram was a brief one and did not go into details as to the cause of Mrs. Bostmann's death, which was no doubt very sudden. The deceased was a pleasant, kind-hearted lady and during her short residence in Sonoma had made many friends.

The Native Sons.

Sonoma Parlor, No. 111, N. S. G. W., will install the following officers next Monday to serve for the ensuing term: Past President, Fred'k T. Duhring; President, L. H. Green; First Vice President, J. E. Poppe; Second Vice President, Geo. Engler; Third Vice President, John R. Cooper; Secretary, Geo. Breitenbach; Marshal, O. W. Gericke; Trustee, Fred'k T. Duhring.

John M. Laughlin of Santa Rosa, District Deputy Grand President of the order, will be present and conduct the ceremonies.

Death of Mrs. Faithful

Mrs. Annie Faithful, wife of Edwin Faithful, died last Sunday after an illness of several weeks. She was the mother of the late Harry and Wm. Faithful, both of whom died in this valley since the family located in El Verano several years ago. The deceased was a native of England and was aged 62 years. The funeral took place from the Congregational Church last Tuesday, the remains being interred in Mountain Cemetery.

The Druid Banquet.

The banquet tendered to Noble Grand Arch Devoto and Grand Secretary Mollison of the Druids at the Toscano Hotel, on Friday night of last week, by the members of Sonoma Grove, No. 75, was attended by a large number of brothers and invited guests. The spread, which was served by Mr. and Mrs. Ciucci, was a feast fit for the gods and was heartily enjoyed by the members of the order and their distinguished visitors.

New Comers.

Mr. L. J. Hammer, who recently purchased the Collins place, adjoining the ranch of Geo. Engler, went to San Francisco last Thursday and returned the following day accompanied by his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Hammer will take up a permanent residence among us.

At the Eagle Hotel, Santa Rosa, the citizens of Sonoma Valley will find good accommodations at reasonable rates. See ad. *

THE LANDSBOROUGH CASE.

To-Day Set for the Arraignment.

L. M. Landsborough, the Deputy County Clerk of Sacramento county, who was to have been arraigned in Judge Hart's court last Saturday on the five indictments brought against him by the Grand Jury of that county, charging him with felonies, has been postponed until to-day, says the Sacramento Bee. He was represented by Hiram W. Johnson and Arthur M. Seymour. The arraignment was postponed for one week, at the request of counsel, who will interpose demurrers to the indictments.

THE REBEKAHS.

They Install Their Officers Last Thursday Evening.

The annual installation of officers of Verdant Rebekah Lodge, No. 99, I. O. O. F., took place in Odd Fellows Hall on Thursday evening. The installation was conducted by District Deputy Grand Master, Mrs. Willis, assisted by Mrs. Wright, Grand Marshal, both of Calistoga. The following are the officers for the ensuing term: Marjorie Linehan, N. G.; Mrs. R. Jansen, V. G.; Mrs. Alice Wagnon, Secretary; Mrs. S. Revie, Financial Secretary; Mrs. S. Culberson, Treasurer.

Those Curling Irons Again.

A few weeks ago Miss Rena Yates of this place nearly lost the sight of one of her eyes in using a pair of curling irons, which accidentally came in contact with the optic. Dr. Walliser of this place treated the injury and succeeded in saving the eye. Now comes news from Petaluma that Miss Edith Brown, the talented vocalist of that city, met with a similar mishap last Sunday. While perfecting her toilet Miss Brown let her curling irons slip and they came in contact with one eye. For a short time it was feared her sight would suffer, but from the San Francisco specialst, whom Miss Brown went to consult immediately, it was learned Monday afternoon that he does not think any bad results will follow.

Game and Fish Warden.

A petition, numerously signed and embracing the names of many of the most prominent and wealthy tax-payers of Sonoma county, will be presented to the Board of Supervisors next Monday requesting that Mr. D. D. Davisson of this place be appointed Game and Fish Warden for this county. Mr. Davisson is a pioneer and one of the earliest promoters of the interests of Sonoma and is heartily in accord with our fish and game laws. No better selection could be made, Dan'l we trust you will get "thar."

A Ten-Pounder.

Chas. Ohm of Embarcadero, one of the best-known anglers in California, has placed us under obligations this week for a ten-pound salmon, one of a number which he caught in Sonoma creek with hook, line and reel. To use the words of Sheriff Sam Allen "it was a beaut."

SCHELLVILLE SIFTINGS

Edwin Lord made a visit to San Francisco last Sunday.

Miss Anna Wadsworth, teacher of the Harvey school, visited Santa Rosa last Monday.

Wm. Goodman is out fishing again after a severe illness. "Trilby" is glad to make a note of this.

Jim Church is up from San Francisco recuperating after a severe attack of la grippe. He was able to land a 12 pound salmon the other day.

The local butchers are complaining of poor business in this place at present. The kick comes on account of Charley Ohm distributing his catch of salmon among his friends.

Chas. Ohm, on Monday last while fishing in Sonoma creek near the Lord place, hooked a fourteen-pound salmon. The fish was a gamey one and it took nearly three hours to land him.

Jas. Albertson visited Embarcadero one day last week on a fishing excursion. He says he fed about five pounds of salmon roe to the carp and if he had used limberger cheese would have had better luck.

Professor John McNeil, the amateur fisherman of Embarcadero, captured several salmon the other day. He had a rope tied around his waist and fastened to a tree so he would not be pulled into the creek and drowned. We cannot afford to loose him.

The local sportsmen, Jo. Anderson, Joe. Donahue, Wm. Switzer and Frank Thompson, returned last Sunday from their hunting trip up the Sacramento river on the sloop-yacht Hope. The boys report having a good time and a pleasant trip until they entered Sonoma creek, when they were run down by the sloop Henrietta. They were lucky, however, in receiving no greater damage than the loss of a bob stay.

TRILBY.

Schellville, Jan. 29, 1897.

Electric Light.

Julius Fochetti now has his machine shop and feed mill lighted at night with incandescent electric lights, which are generated by a 140-volt dynamo. These are the first lights of the kind introduced into Sonoma and we trust they will be the forerunner of an electric light plant in this town, which is way behind the times in modern appliances.

The happiness of life may be greatly increased by small courtesies in which there is no parade, whose voice is too still to tease, and which manifest themselves by tender and affectionate looks, and little kind acts of attention.

SMALL—CARDOZA WEDDING.

A pretty home wedding took place in San Francisco at the home of the bride's mother on Howard street last Wednesday evening, when Miss Reta Cardoza and Frank P. Small, formerly a resident of Sonoma, were united in marriage. The rooms were tastefully decorated with flowers and foilage. Shortly after 8 o'clock the impressive marriage service of the Methodist Church was performed by the Rev. Mr. Dille. The bride wore a dress of white silk trimmed with chiffon and pearl passamenterie. She was attended by little Dora Hollinsworth as maid of honor. After the congratulations were over the doors of the dinning room were thrown open and the wedding feast was enjoyed by all present. The rest of the evening was spent in social converse and admiring the many beautiful presents presented to the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Small have went to house keeping in a well equipped little home in the metropolis, where they will begin their new life amid the good wishes of their friends.

SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE.

SONOMA, SATURDAY, JAN. 30, 1897.

SHYNESS IS SERIOUS.

MEDICAL EXPERTS SAY IT IS A SYMPTOM OF MELANCHOLIA.

It Takes Various Forms, but Is Invariably a Forerunner of Dementia—A Disease That Should Be Carefully Treated In Time—Affects Men as Well as Women.

At last it has been discovered that the reason the girl who seems exceedingly shy acts in the fashion she does is that she is demented.

This is the result of extensive investigation by insanity experts on both sides of the water. Exceptional bashfulness, as it is called, is really shyness. It is a morbid condition of the mind, a certain sort of dementia.

Often is the expression heard that a person is painfully shy. Yet in such an instance no doubt has been raised as to the mental condition of the object of the remark. Nevertheless, it is far more than probable that the individual referred to was suffering from insanity just as much if not more, than many persons who are living out a tortured existence within the walls of a madhouse.

It is a well known fact that one of the most notable symptoms of insanity is that which causes the person afflicted to shun the company of others. Loneliness is an incentive to insanity. Confinement in a solitary cell in a prison often breeds madness. It is altogether an unnatural mental condition which impels a person to avoid the society of humanity. No one whose condition is normal ever consents to such an existence.

"Shyness is as much a disease as scarlet fever. It is recognized as a symptom of dementia or melancholia, just as an extremely strong willed person, or one who is what is termed unusually self assertive, is regarded by physicians as a possible subject for acute paresis.

"This shyness takes various forms, such as a sudden feeling of faintness and weakness on looking down from any extreme height. It is present when a woman persists in looking under the bed before retiring, although she knows full well that there is no man there. I know of one case of a woman who, when she turns out the gas, invariably lights a match to see if she has turned it completely off, and nine times out of ten she lights another match to see if she threw the first match into the coal scuttle or fireplace. That is another form of what may be termed shyness.

"This shyness is due to a variety of causes. It is very often the case that a system which is run down leads to this condition of mind. The continual thinking upon any subject, or what is termed brooding over a certain thing, leads to this. If not checked in time, melancholia results.

"This shyness is as common to men as to women. Some men seem embarrassed and ill at ease when in the presence of women, while, on the other hand, it is often noticed that the presence of gentlemen makes some women very ill at ease, only, in justice to the sex, it must be stated that this very rarely happens.

"There are many reasons for these facts, but the most common one is ill health. Should a person so troubled go to a physician, he or she would be regarded as possessing symptoms indicating a lack of will power and approaching insanity in some form. There are waves of morbid shyness, just as there are waves of insanity. There are waves of certain kinds of suicide, resulting from insanity. There are waves of bridge jumping, killing with razors or knives, shooting and death by poison.

"Many suicides are due to temporary insanity, brought on by a variety of causes. One of the first symptoms is shyness. Persons afflicted with this shyness never take up any of the sciences or professions or become students. They lack the will power necessary to do so. Where the normal mind of man overcomes difficulties and troubles when they come, the shy, retiring man seeks relief in suicide."

Dr. Henry Campbell, who is the physician in charge of the Northwest London hospital, says that morbid shyness is, like other mental disorders, an exaggeration of an unnatural physical state. It is among women, he declares, that this symptom of mental disorder is most often seen. Lacking the physical strength of man in most instances, they are unable to withstand the depression that sometimes seizes them. That depression gives birth to a desire to be unobserved. Here is the beginning of the fit of shyness which results in unbalancing the mind and creating the idea that the very sight of others is an affliction to be avoided.

Several New York doctors who discussed the question at length said that they had noticed particularly among young women whom they had been called upon to see that those who had exhibited the greatest embarrassment in the presence of young men were lacking in that mental equipoise necessary to the normal brain. Modesty is one thing, they said, shyness quite another. The one causes the young woman to refrain from action that would bring upon her just criticism. The other is simply impelled to a course of action for which there is neither rhyme nor reason, and one that only results in general discomfort.—New York Journal.

About the Same.

"By the way, where is the major nowadays?" asked the mutual friend.

"He is in an institution for the treatment of the feeble minded," said the colonel, with a trace of acrimony in his voice.

"You don't say!"

"Well, sah, they don't call the place by that name, sah. But you can see for yo'self that it amounts to the same thing. It is a water cure establishment, sah."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A ROYAL CORNER.

How the Sacred, if Lonely, Precinct Was Invaded by an American.

An American attending a wedding reception in a great house in London congratulated bride and bridegroom and passed the usual compliments with the host and hostess.

There was a great throng of guests, and he could not linger at the entrance of the drawing room when there were many behind him anxious to offer their greetings.

Perceiving a quiet corner to the right of the bride where a gentleman and a lady were standing apart from the other guests he went directly to it, unwittingly coming to a stop between two royal personages.

The American was not aware of the fact that he was face to face with one of the queen's daughters and had turned his back upon another member of the royal family. He stood quietly looking about, hoping to see some acquaintance in the company with whom he might have a chat, and soon became uncomfortably conscious that he was attracting attention and that the hostess and bride were casting uneasy glances in the direction of the corner where he had taken shelter. While the drawing room was crowded, the company of guests with one consent avoided the secluded corner where he and his two royal companions were stationed.

An acquaintance in the background perceived his mistake, and coming within hailing distance motioned to him. He left his two companions in exclusive occupation of the corner, turning his back upon both as he edged his way through the throng, while everybody stared at him. When he reached the spot where his acquaintance was waiting for him, the stage whisper was breathed into his ear:

"You have been poaching on royal preserves. You are a privileged character because you are an American, but no Englishman ventures to turn his back upon a prince or a princess. People were staring you out of countenance because they took it for granted that you must be a royal personage, yet they were unable to identify you."

The answer might have been made that every American is a sovereign by the divine right of equality of free citizenship, but this would have been a meaningless pleasantry in an English drawing room, where social etiquette has a sanctity superior to loyalty to democratic principle.

The American thanked his friend for rescuing him from an embarrassing position, and then stood by and watched the corner where royalty was isolated from too close contact with the world of wealth and fashion.

No guest approached the royal pair. Their presence was an act of condescension to the host and hostess, and they remained on exhibition as the patrons of this social function without having their corner invaded. Everybody was careful not to approach them too closely, and there was a general sense of relief when they departed and the necessity for backing away from them on side tracks was removed.—Youth's Companion.

NEED FOR SLEEP.

The Most Important Compensation For All Effects of Fatigue.

By far the most important compensation for all effects of fatigue is sleep. Everybody, even the man mentally most inert, develops when awake a mass of mental effort which he cannot afford continuously without suffering. We need, therefore, regularly recurring periods in which the consumption of mental force shall be slower than the continuous replacement. The lower the degree to which the activity of the brain sinks the more rapid and more complete the recovery.

The mental vigor of most men is usually maintained at a certain height for the longest time in the forenoon. Evidence of fatigue come on later at this time of day than in the evening, when the store of force in our brain has been already considerably drawn upon by the whole day's work. If no recovery by sleep is enjoyed or it is imperfect, the consequences will invariably make themselves evident the next day in a depression of mental vigor, as well as in a rise in the personal susceptibility to fatigue. The rapidity with which one of the persons I experimented upon could perform his task in addition sank about a third after a night's journey by railway with insufficient sleep. Another experimenter could detect the effects of keeping himself awake at night in a gradual decrease of vigor lasting through four days. This observation was all the more surprising because the subject was not conscious of the long duration of the disturbance and was first made aware of it incidentally by the results of continued measurements on the causes of the manifestations of fatigue.—Popular Science Monthly.

Officials Without an Office.

The queen's watermen are officials without an office. A waterman without a barge must be something like an editor without a paper. But we must not forget this difference, that while one fattens on the indulgence of the nation the other would starve. There are altogether 36 of this admirable body of do nothings. For performing their task admirably they receive a solatium of about £5 a year.—Exchange.

All Seasons For Its Own.

It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves Teething troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. Castoria assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

Dr. G. C. Osgood, Lowell, Mass.

"The use of Castoria is so universal and its merits so well known that it seems a work of supererogation to endorse it. Few are the intelligent families who do not keep Castoria within easy reach."
Carlos Martyn, D.D., New York City.

"I prescribe Castoria every day for children who are suffering from constipation, with better effect than I receive from any other combination of drugs."
Dr. L. O. Morgan, South Amboy, N. J.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M.D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"For several years I have recommended Castoria, and shall always continue to do so as it has invariably produced beneficial results."
Edwin F. Pardee, M.D., New York City.

"We have three children and they 'Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.' When we give one a dose, the others cry for one too. I shall always take pleasure in recommending this best child's medicine."

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Two years ago, I had the grippe, and it left me with a cough which gave me no rest night or day. My family physician prescribed for me, changing the medicine as often as he found the things I had taken were not helping me, but, in spite of his attendance, I got no better. Finally, my husband,—reading one day of a gentleman who had had the grippe and was cured by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,—procured, for me, a bottle of this medicine, and before I had taken half of it, I was cured. I have used the Pectoral for my children and in my family, whenever we have needed it, and have found it a specific for colds, coughs, and lung troubles."—Emily Wood, North St., Elkton, Md.
